The Boy In The Suitcase (Nina Borg Book 1)

Synopsis

Nina Borg, a Red Cross nurse, wife, and mother of two, is a compulsive do-gooder who can't say no when someone asks for help—even when she knows better. When her estranged friend Karin leaves her a key to a public locker in the Copenhagen train station, Nina gets suckered into her most dangerous project yet. Inside the locker is a suitcase, and inside the suitcase is a three-year-old boy: naked and drugged, but alive. Is the boy a victim of child trafficking? Can he be turned over to authorities, or will they only return him to whoever sold him? When Karin is discovered brutally murdered, Nina realizes that her life and the boy's are in jeopardy, too. In an increasingly desperate trek across Denmark, Nina tries to figure out who the boy is, where he belongs, and who exactly is trying to hunt him down.

"The Boy in the Suitcase," by Lene Kaaberbol and Agnete Fris, is set in Denmark. The first few chapters are confusing; new characters pop up constantly. We know right off the bat that a little boy has been placed in a suitcase, but why? A wealthy man named Jan Marquat lives with his wife and son in a fancy house near a cliff, and it is clear that Jan is very worried. Jucas, an oversized

Lithuanian with a fierce temper, has a girlfriend named Barbara whom he hopes to marry. However, he has some unfinished business to take care of before they tie the knot. Another Lithuanian named Sigita Ramoskiene is a single mom who dotes on her three-year-old son, Mikas. Finally, Nina Borg, a nurse who works for the Danish Red Cross Center Furesø, gives aid and comfort to refugees from far-flung places. Although she is married with two children of her own, Nina is an obsessive Good Samaritan who often puts her mission to help those in need ahead of her family's welfare. Somehow, all of these people are interrelated, but we must wait patiently while the authors connect the dots. Nina, in an attempt to help a friend, winds up trying to protect a terrified toddler who speaks no Danish. She is reluctant to go to the police, since she is leery of authority figures. The authors shift back and forth between Nina, Jan, Jucas, Sigita, and others. We grow to care about the desperate Sigita, whose son has gone missing, and the driven Nina, who is on the run with a youngster she is determined to shield from harm. It eventually becomes apparent that Sigita, Nina, and the little boy are all in grave danger. Although Kaaber and Fris maintain a high level of suspense, the plot hinges on a twist (revealed at the end) that is melodramatic and far-fetched.
